

Papua New Guinea

The National Department of Health (NDOH) in Papua New Guinea regrets to say that e-Health facilities are not yet installed in the National Health Information System, the hospital records or within Public Health.

The sixth survey question 'What have been the outcomes of your e-health initiatives?' has not been addressed simply because our Telecommunication system in regard to the "e" processes are not yet developed to the level of industrialised or developed nations.

The email systems (with their many servers) are still not fully servicing the entire country due to major geographic and logistic challenges.
